What is a FXADS?

An "Ad View" refers to the act of an advertisement being displayed or shown to a viewer or user. In the context of digital advertising, an ad view occurs when an online ad, such as a banner, video, or native ad, is rendered on a web page or within a mobile app, and a user has the opportunity to see it.

About FXADS

Digital Advertising:

In digital advertising, an ad view, also known as an impression, occurs when an ad is displayed on a web page or within a mobile app, and it has the opportunity to be seen by a user. Ad views are essential for advertisers, as they represent the potential reach of an ad campaign and provide insights into how many times an ad was displayed to an audience.

Ad Viewing Tasks:

Users are presented with a list of ad-viewing tasks or video advertisements to watch.

These tasks may require watching a full video ad or interacting with it in some way, such as clicking on a link or answering a survey question.

Earning Rewards:

Upon completion of the ad-viewing task, users are rewarded with a small amount of money, points, or virtual currency, which can be accumulated and later redeemed for cash, gift cards, or other rewards
